NEW PASSENGER RAILWAY.

If Adolph Brodbeck of Nasville, Tenn., has any intention of competing for flying machine prizes with his new "air car" he does not indicate it in the description of his invention, illustrated herewith. He states that the car is to be sufficiently buoyant to relieve the guiding rails or cables of the greater portion of the weight of the car. One great advantage obtained by this machine over the independent flying machine is that it is not compelled to carry storage devices to produce the necessary power, as an electric motor is used and the current drawn directly from the feed cable located beneath the car. As the cables are not used for traction purposes they need not be heavy, and the supporting brackets between stations are also rather light. To set the car in motion the overhead propeller is first started to lift a portion of the weight from the wires, and when this is attained the screw at the rear is set in motion and the journey begins. The passengers find accommodations in seats arranged around the interior of the car, and it is not probable that the company which operates this passenger line will allow the patrons of the road to hang on around the edges after the manner of the street car companies of the present day.

INDIAN PRAIRIE DOG HUNTS.

The Little Animals Are Deemed Dainty Dish by the Navajos.

The Navajo Indian, while he cannot be prevailed upon to eat a rabbit, is greedily fond of fat prairie dogs. Large communities of these small animals abound on the western plains, and the Navajo has resorted to many ingenious methods for trapping his coveted dainty. One of them is by the aid of a bit of mirror placed at the entrance to a burrow. When the animal ventures from his bedroom, deep underground, he sees a familiar image mocking him at the front door, and he hurries out to confront the impudent intruder when he is pinned to the ground with an arrow.

But the most effective method is what the Indians call the rain hunt. As soon as the steady downpour of summer rain begins every Navajo who can walk repairs to the prairie dog village with hoes, sharp sticks, or any digging implement. With these they hollow out trenches, that will lead the storm water into as many burrows as possible. Soon a little stream is pouring down each small home, and the inmate, much disturbed, pops out to see what the matter can be. Many of the animals remain under ground until they are drowned, and their bodies float to the surface. After such a hunt, in which many pounds of prairie dogs are generally secured, there is a feast for many days in the Navajo huts.

Two Kinds of Juries.

Two Pittsburgers interested in painting met in front of an art store window downtown and fell into conversation regarding the jury that is to pass upon the paintings submitted for exhibition in the coming display at the Carnegie Institute.

"There is," said one, "a similarity between the functions of an art jury and those of the twelve men whose duty it is to try defendants indicted for murder."

"Where is the similarity?" asked the other.

"Well, both juries decide whether the object of their investigations shall hang."

"That is true, but there is also a strong dissimilarity."

"How do you make that out?"

"The art jury hangs the best pictures and murder juries hang the worst men."

"I don't know that what you say is always true to an art jury. Painters whose pictures are rejected say not, but perhaps we had better drop the subject."

No Æsop's Fables in This.

George Ade, whose "Fables in Slang" have brought him into prominence as a humorist, is from Indiana. In talking with a lady recently, she asked him if he had ever noticed how many bright people came from that State.

"Indeed I have, madam," he said, "and I have noticed, too, that the brighter they are, the sooner they come."

On another occasion Ade was listening to a restaurant orchestra with some friends when the band began to play the intermezzo from "Rusticana." As the first few bars were played one of the listeners asked:

"Didn't De Koven write that?"

"Not yet," said Ade.—New York Times.

FROM
POORHOUSE TO PALACE
BY MARY J. HOLMES

While the family were making arrangements to move from Glenwood to Chicopee, Henry for the first time in his life began to see how little use he was to himself or any one else. Nothing was expected of him, consequently nothing was asked of him, he began to wonder how he himself was henceforth to exist. His father would be in California, and he had too much pride to lounge around the old homestead, which had come to them through George Moreland's generosity.

Suddenly it occurred to him that he, too, would go with his father—he would help him repair their fortunes—he would be a man, and when he returned home, hope painted a joyful meeting with his mother and Jenny, who should be proud to acknowledge him as a son and brother. Mr. Lincoln warmly seconded his resolution, which possibly would have never been carried out had not Henry heard of Miss Herndon's engagement with a rich old bachelor, whom he had often heard her ridicule. Cursing the fickleness of the fair lady, and half-wishing that he had not broken with Ella, whose fortune, though not what he had expected, was considerable, he bade adieu to his native sky, and two weeks after the family removed to Chicopee, he sailed with his father for the land of gold.

But alas! The tempter was there before him, and in an unguarded moment he fell. The newly made grave, the narrow coffin, the pale, dead sister and the solemn vow were all forgotten and a debauch of three weeks was followed by a violent fever, which in a few days cut short his mortal career. He died alone, with none but his father to witness his wild ravings, in which he talked of his distant home, of Jenny and Rose, Mary Howard and Ella, the last of whom he seemed now to love with a madness amounting almost to frenzy. Tearing out handfuls of his rich brown hair, he thrust it into his father's hand, bidding him to carry it to Ella and tell her that the heart she had so earnestly coveted was hers in death. And the father, far more wretched now than when his first-born daughter died, promised everything, and when his only son was dead, he laid him down to sleep beneath the blue sky of California, where not one of the many bitter tears shed for him in his far-off home could fall upon his lonely grave.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Great was the excitement in Rice Corner when it was known that on the evening of the 10th of September a grand wedding would take place in the house of Mrs. Mason. Mary was to be married to the "richest man in Boston," so the story ran, and, what was better yet, many of the neighbors were to be invited. Almost every day, whether pleasant or not, Jenny Lincoln came over to discuss the matter, and to ask if it were not time to send for William, who was to be one of the groomsmen, while she, together with Ida, were to officiate as bridesmaids. In this last capacity Ella had been requested to act, but the tears came quickly to her large mournful eyes, and turning away, she wondered how Mary could thus mock her grief!

From one fashionable watering place to another Mrs. Campbell had taken her, and finding that nothing there had power to rouse her drooping energies, she had, toward the close of the summer, brought her back to Chicopee, hoping that old scenes and familiar faces would effect what novelty and excitement had failed to do. All unworthy as Henry Lincoln had been, his sad death had cast a dark shadow across Ella's pathway. Hour after hour would she sit, gazing upon the locks of shining hair, which over land and sea had come to her in a letter from her father, who told her of the closing scene, when Henry called for her to cool the heat of his fevered brow. Every word and look of tenderness was treasured up, and the belief fondly cherished that he had always loved her thus, else why in the last fearful struggle was she alone remembered of all the dear ones in his distant home?

The bridal day was bright, beautiful and balmy, as the first days of September often are, and when the sun went down the full silvery moon came softly up, as if to shower her blessings upon the nuptials about to be celebrated. Many and brilliant lights were flashing from the windows of Mrs. Mason's cottage. And now guest after guest flitted down the narrow staircase and entered the parlor, which, with the bedroom adjoining, was soon filled. Ere long Mr. Seldon who seemed to be master of ceremonies, appeared. Immediately the crowd fell back, leaving a vacant space in front of the mirror. The busy hum of voices died away, and only a few suppressed whispers of, "There!—Look!—See!—Oh, my!" were heard, as the bridal party took their places.

Among the first to congratulate "Mrs. Moreland" was Sally Furbush, followed by Mrs. Perkins, who whispered to George that "she kinder had a notion how 'twould end when she first saw him in the school house; but I'm glad you've got him," turning to Mary, "for it must be easier livin' in the city than keepin' school. You'll have a hired girl, I s'pose?"

When supper was announced the widow made herself very useful in waiting upon the table and asking some of the Boston ladies "if they'd be helped to anything in them dishes," pointing to the finger glasses, which now for the first time appeared in Rice Corner! The half-suppressed mirth of the ladies convinced the widow that she'd made a blunder, and perfectly disgusted with "new-fangled fashions," she retreated into the kitchen, where she found things more to her taste, and "thanked her stars she could, if she liked, eat with her fingers, and wipe them on her pocket handkerchief."

Soon after her engagement Mary had asked that Sally should go with her to her city home. To this George willingly assented, and it was decided that she should remain with Mrs. Mason until the bridal party returned from the western tour they were intending to take. Sally knew nothing of this arrangement until the morning of the wedding, when she was told that she was not to return to the poorhouse again.

"And verily, I have this day met with a great deliverance," said she, and tears, the first shed in many a year, mingled with the old creature's thanks for this unexpected happiness. As Mary was leaving she whispered in her ear, "If your travels lead you near my Willie's grave drop a tear on it for my sake. You'll find it under the buckeye tree, where the tall grass and wild flowers grow."

George had relatives in Chicago, and, after spending a short time in that city Mary, remembering Sally's request, expressed a desire to visit the spot renowned as the burial place of "Willie and Willie's father." Ever ready to gratify her slightest wish, George consented, and toward the close of a mild autumnal day they stopped at a small public house on the border of a vast prairie. The arrival of so distinguished-looking people caused quite a commotion, and after duly inspecting Mary's handsome traveling dress and calculating its probable cost, the hostess departed to prepare the evening meal, which was soon forthcoming.

When supper was over and the family had gathered into the pleasant sitting room, George asked if there was ever a man in those parts by the name of Furbush.

"What! Bill Furbush?" asked the landlord.

George did not know, but thought likely that might have been his name, as his son was called William.

"Lud, yes!" returned the landlord. "I knowed Bill Furbush well—he came here from Massachusetts, and I from Varmont; but, poor feller, he was too weakly to bear much, and the first fever he took finished him up. His old woman was as clever a creature as ever was, but she had some high notions."

"Did she die, too?" asked George.

"No, but it's a pity she didn't, for when Bill and the boy died she went ravin' mad, and I never felt so like cryin' as I did when I see her a tearin' her hair and goin' on so. We kept her a spell, and then her old man's brother's girl came for her and took her off; and the last I heard the girl was dead, and she was in the poorhouse somewhere East. She was born there, I b'lieve."

"No, she worn't, either," said the landlady, who for some minutes had been aching to speak. "No, she warn't, either; I know all about it. She was born in England, and got to be quite a girl before she came over. Her name was Sarah Fletcher, and Peter Fletcher, who died with the cholera, was her own uncle, and all the connection she had in this country; but goodness, suz, what ails you?" she added, as Mary turned white, while George passed his arm around her to keep her from falling. "Here, Sophrony, fetch the camphire; she's goin' to faint."

But Mary did not faint, and after smelling the camphor, she said, "Go on, madam, and tell me more of Sarah Fletcher."

"She can do it," whispered the landlord, with a sly wink. "She knows everybody's history from Dan to Beersheby."

"This intimation was wholly lost on the good-humored hostess, who continued, "Mr. Fletcher died when Sarah was small, and her mother married a Mr.——, I don't justly remember his name——"

"Temple?" suggested Mary.

"Yes, Temple, that's it. He was rich and cross, and broke her heart by the time she had her second baby. Sarah was adopted by her Grandmother Fletcher, who died, and she came with her uncle to America."

"Did she ever speak of her sisters?" asked Mary, and the woman replied:

"Before she got crazy she did. One of 'em, she said, was in this country somewhere, and t'other, the one she remembered the best, and talked the most about, lived in England. She said she wanted to write to 'em, but her uncle, he hated the Temples, so he wouldn't let her, and as time went on she kinder forgot 'em, and didn't know where to direct, and after she took crazy she never would speak of her sisters, or own that she had any."

"Is Mr. Furbush buried near here?" asked George, and the landlord answered:

"Little better than a stone's throw. I can see the very tree from here, and maybe your younger eyes can make out the graves. He ought to have a gravestun, for he was a good feller."

The new moon was shining, and Mary, who came to her husband's side, could plainly discern the buckeye tree, and the two graves where "Willie and Willie's father" had long been sleeping. The next morning before the sun was up Mary stood by the mounds where often in years gone by Sally Furbush had seen the moon go down, and the stars grow pale in the coming day, as she kept her tireless watch over her loved and lost.

"Willie was my cousin—your cousin," said Mary, resting her hand upon the bit of board which stood at the head of the little graves. George understood her wishes, and when they left the place a handsome marble slab marked the spot where the father and his infant son were buried.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Bewildered, and unable to comprehend a word, Sally listened while Mary told her of the relationship between them; but the mists which for years had shrouded her reason were too dense to be suddenly cleared away; and when Mary wept, winding her arms around her neck and calling her "aunt;" and when the elegant Mrs. Campbell, scarcely less bewildered than Sally herself, came forward, addressing her as "sister," she turned aside to Mrs. Mason, asking in a whisper "what had made them crazy?"

But when Mary spoke of little Willie's grave, and the tree, which overshadowed it, of the green prairie and cottage by the brook, once her western home, Sally listened, and at last, one day, a week or two after her arrival in Boston, she suddenly clasped her hands closely over her temples, exclaiming: "It's come! It's come! I remember now—the large garden—the cross old man—the dead mother—the rosy-cheeked Ella I loved so well——"

"That was my mother—my mother," interrupted Mary.

For a moment Sally regarded her intently, and then catching her in her arms, cried over her, calling her "her precious child," and wondering she had never noticed how much she was like Ella.

"And don't you remember the baby Jane?" asked Mrs. Campbell, who was present.

"Perfectly—perfectly," answered Sally. "He died and you came in a carriage, but didn't cry—nobody cried but Mary."

It was in vain that Mary tried to explain to her that Mrs. Campbell was her sister—once the baby Jane. Sally was not to be convinced. To her Jane and the little Alice were the same. There was none of her blood in Mrs. Campbell's veins, "or why," said she, "did she leave us so long in obscurity, me and my niece, Mrs. George Moreland, Esq.?"

This was the title which she always gave Mary when speaking of her, while to Ella, who occasionally spent a week in her sister's pleasant home, she gave the name of "little cipher," as expressing exactly her opinion of her. Nothing so much excited Sally, or threw her into so violent a passion, as to have Ella call her aunt.

"If I wasn't her kin when I wore a sixpenny calico," said she, "I certainly am not now that I dress in purple and fine linen."

When Sally first went to Boston George procured for her the best possible medical advice, but her case was of so long standing that but little hope was entertained of her entire recovery. Still, everything was done for her that could be done, and after a time she became far less boisterous than formerly, and sometimes appeared perfectly rational for days.

True to her promise, on Mary's twenty-first birthday, Mrs. Campbell made over to her one-fourth of her property, and Mary, remembering her intentions toward William Bender, immediately offered him one-half of it. But he declined accepting it, saying that his profession was sufficient to support both himself and Jenny, for in a few weeks Jenny, whose father had returned from California, was coming and already a neat little cottage, a mile from the city, was being prepared for her reception. Mary did not urge the matter, but many an article of furniture more costly than William was able to purchase found its way into the cottage, which, with its overhanging vines, climbing roses and profusion of flowers, seemed just the home for Jenny Lincoln.

And when the flowers were in full bloom, when the birds sang amid the trees, and the summer sky was bright and blue, Jenny came to the cottage, a joyous, loving bride, believing her own husband the best in the world, and wondering if there was ever any one as happy as herself. And Jenny was very happy. Blithe as a bee, she flitted about the house and garden, and if in the morning a tear glistened in her laughing eyes as William bade her adieu, it was quickly dried, and all day long she busied herself in her household matters, studying some agreeable surprise for her husband, and trying for his sake to be very neat and orderly.

There was no place which Ella loved so well to visit, or where she seemed so happy, as at the "Cottage," and as she was of but little use at home, she frequently spent whole weeks with Jenny, becoming gradually more cheerful—more like herself, but always insisting that she should never be married.

The spring following Mary's removal to Boston, Mrs. Mason came down to the city to live with her adopted daughter, greatly to the delight of Aunt Martha, whose home was lonelier than it was wont to be, for George was gone, and Ida, too, had recently been married to Mr. Elwood and removed to Lexington, Ky.

And now a glance at Chicopee, and our story is done. Mr. Lincoln's California adventure had been a successful one, and not long after his return he received from George Moreland a conveyance of the farm, which, under Mr. Parker's efficient management, was in a high state of cultivation. Among the inmates of the poorhouse but few changes have taken place. Miss Grundy, who continues at the helm, has grown somewhat older and crosser, while Uncle Peter labors industriously at a new fiddle, the gift of Mary, who is still remembered with much affection.

Lydia Knight, now a young lady of sixteen, is a pupil at Mount Holyoke, and Mrs. Perkins, after wondering and wondering where the money came from, has finally concluded that "some of George's folks must have sent it!"

(The end.)

Men Who Chase After Fires.

The latest thing for fire insurance agents to do is to be on the spot looking for new business while the old business is burning up. One of the canvassers of a New England company began to make money so rapidly a few months ago that some of his competitors tried to find out how he did it.

They learned that he made a specialty of following the fire engines, and if the fire happened to be in a tenement house or flat he waited until the flames were subdued and reaped a harvest by insuring the other tenants and neighbors. Hosts of people are apt to be so badly scared by a fire near their home that if not insured they are glad to take out policies on the spot. It didn't take the other agents long to catch on, and it is said that the other day after a fire twenty-one agents wrote seventy policies in the immediate neighborhood.

"It is a great scheme," said one of these agents yesterday. "All one has to do is to hit the iron while it is hot. Don't talk insurance to any of the tenants or neighbors while the fire is going on, because they are likely to be too excited to think of anything but their personal safety. When everything is quieted down and the fire engines are going away is the time to jump in with your proposition."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 3, 1902.

With the passing of the year 1901 we note it has been a prosperous one for our nation, state and county. There has been no great boom but all have been blessed with a goodly share of prosperity. Our merchants report that during the year just closed they have done more business than any previous year. The crops of the valley were generally good and fair prices prevailed. The New Year has arrived and with every indication that it will be more profitable than the one just passed. This is the hope that all have for the year and we sincerely trust that such will be the outcome and with this in view the EXPOSITOR profoundly wishes its readers and friends a happy and prosperous year.

It is very certain that some individuals have not intellectual powers sufficient to know the difference between malicious mischief and a practical joke as may be judged from the depredations committed in the way of disturbing and destroying private property in Sonoma on New Years morning. Boys this is a bad beginning for the new year especially so if your identity be discovered by parties who suffered at your hands.

THE New Year was ushered in at this place with the discharging of fire arms, hilarious yelling and two taps of the fire bell. During the day the usual greetings were exchanged while the more sober paused to reflect on the past and frame new resolutions for the future.

Finds Way to Live Long

The startling announcement of a Discovery that will surely lengthen life is made by editor O. H. Downey, of Churubusco, Ind. "I wish to state," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is the most infallible remedy that I have ever known for Coughs, Colds and Grip. It's invaluable to people with weak lungs. Having this wonderful medicine no one need dread Pneumonia or Consumption. Its relief is instant and cure certain. R. G. The surveyors of the California Gas and Electric company are at work in the valley. It is said they are surveying a route for an electric road to run through the valley to Napa. They are stopping at the Union but withhold all definite information.

The new British steamship Kinsman, the largest oil carrier in the world, was recently at Philadelphia to load 2,100,000 gallons of petroleum in bulk for European account. The next largest vessel of the bulk-carrying type now afloat carries less than 2,000,000 gallons, which shows the importance of a vessel of the Kinsman's type.

Glen Ellen Items

Mr. Hardman and family have moved to the Allen Cottage on O'Donnell Ave.

The ladies of the Congregational church gave a supper on New Years eve at their hall on Park Ave.

A new buildiug intended for a store is now under construction on O'Donnel Ave.

Mrs. J. W. Gibson and daughter who have been quite ill the past week are much improved.

The election of officers and other important business was transacted at a meeting of the Glen Ellen Natives last Saturday evening.

The installation of officers of Glen Ellen Grange will take place next Saturday. Past Master Dowdall of ElVerano will officiate.

Quite a number of our people attended the dance on New Years eve at Sonoma last Tuesday evening.

A. E. Shelly, the former barber here, has removed to Sebastopol and Mr. Dinan of San Francisco has taken his place.

Dr. O'Donnel is making many improvements to his cottages and states that the coming summer will be prosperous to Glen Ellen.

A church social is talked of for January 25th. A good progrm is being arranged and no doubt an enjoyable time will be had by all who attend.

Wm. Van DeWalen, our popular shoemaker, reports a brisk business. We hope that it may continue as he turns out excellent work.

Miss Formosa Henderson, a Former Sonoma girl, Becoming a Noted Singer.

A Chicago dispatch under date of December 28 has the following to say of a former Sonoma girl who will be remembered by many in this valley when she resided with her parents on the McElroy place,

At the Studebaker Theater, on Wednesday afternoon, the role of Michaela, in "Carmen," will be sung for the first time by Miss Formosa Henderson, one of the most promising of the Castle Square "buds." Miss Henderson is a San Francisco girl, daughter of the late Judge J. J. Henderson, General Grant's Minister to China. She was born in Amoy during her father's diplomatic term, and christened Formosa in honor of one of the daughters of the present Empress. She joined the Castle Square forces as a member of the chorus two seasons ago. Her advance has been steady and rapid. Miss Henderson is a graceful blonde, with beautiful features and a charming figure. Her voice is a pure lyric soprano of exquisite quality, and she is full of enthusiasm and ambition that will surely bring her to the fore.

Tobacco Culture

The subject of tobacco culture is a question that is being considered by many of the farmers at Hopland. The question is not problematic as several tests have been made and with good success. Ahrens and Hartman, of San Francisco, Tobacconists, are back of the proposition and they want to secure 150 acres to set out to tobacco. We also learn that several parties up Dry Creek way have leased land suitable for growing tobacco at the rate of $20 per acre. Tuesday we were shown samples of cigars and also samples of tobacco made from the plant grown at Hopland.—Reveille.

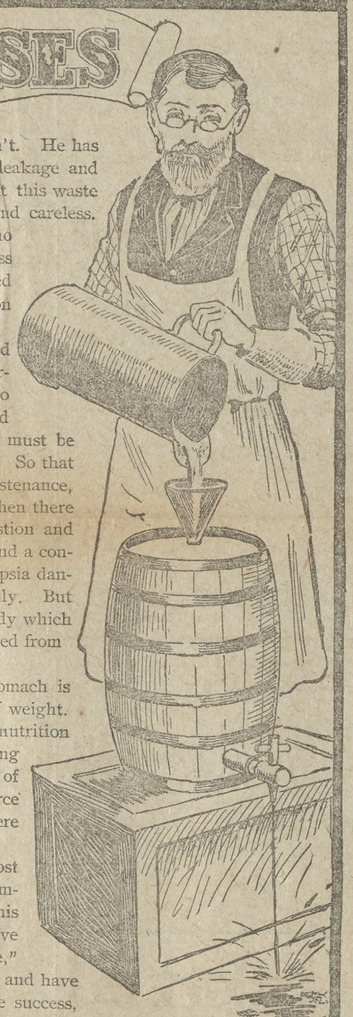
LEAKS AND LOSSES



The grocer thinks he is filling the cask, but he isn't. He has to take account of that open spigot with its steady leakage and certain loss. The man who would ignorantly permit this waste and loss would be simply put down as heedless and careless. But the man who would knowingly permit it, who would continue his efforts to fill the cask regardless of the palpable waste and loss would be considered little better than a madman, and as a merchant on the highway to ruin.

Every time man or woman puts food into a diseased stomach there is a repetition of the folly of the merchant in his effort to fill his leaking cask. We eat to live. Physical life is sustained by food and by food alone. But in order to sustain life the food eaten must be digested and its nutrition extracted and assimilated. So that it is not by the food eaten that we must reckon sustenance, but by only so much of it as is properly digested. When there is disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition there is failure in the digestive processes and a consequent loss of nutrition. That is what makes dyspepsia dangerous. We think of it as affecting the stomach only. But it affects the whole body and every organ of the body which depends for life and strength upon the nutrition derived from food.

The proof of this loss of nutrition when the stomach is diseased, is that it is generally accompanied by loss of weight. It naturally would be. If life is sustained by the nutrition derived from food, and part of this nutrition is being lost and wasted, there will be a corresponding waste of flesh and loss of weight. And as nutrition is the source of physical strength, when there is loss of nutrition there is a loss of the strength contained in that nutrition.

If you are weak, run-down and losing flesh, the most probable cause of your condition is disease of the stomach and digestive and nutritive tract. Probably this cause of disease has not occurred to you. You have had heart "trouble," liver "trouble," kidney "trouble," as a consequence of diseased stomach and innutrition and have "doctored" for these organs, naturally with very little success, because the loss of nutrition which is a loss of strength is going on all the time.

The simple, sensible thing to do is to stop that leak and loss of nutrition, then the logical result should be the regaining of lost flesh and lost strength. This is just the result that follows the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, stops the leak and loss of nutrition and builds up the body with sound flesh and strong muscle. The scales prove it. There's no guess-work about such cures. If you are weak, run-down, and losing flesh, nervous, irritable, and generally miserable, you can make yourself healthy and strong again by using "Golden Medical Discovery" to stop the loss of nutrition which is a loss of physical sustenance and physical strength.

"I was weak, nervous and dizzy, with a fainting sensation when walking," writes Jesse Childress, Esq., of Samuel, Sullivan Co., Tenn. "Could not walk any distance; always felt bad after eating; felt as though something was sticking in my throat, always uneasiness in stomach. Was taken down in January, 1898. Doctored with two or three physicians, but they did not relieve me any. I grew worse and used everything I could think of; was nearly ready to give up and then some one told me that Dr. Pierce's medicine was good, so I began taking his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I have taken seven bottles of that now and am as stout as ever, and am enjoying health as much as ever before. I worked all summer and this winter as much as anyone. My case was nervous dyspepsia and liver disease of which your medicine has cured me. In September, 1898, my weight was about ninety-five pounds, now it is one hundred and ninety-five. Please accept my sincere thanks."

"I wish to say to the world that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved a great blessing to me," writes Mrs. Ellen E. Bacon, of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass. "Prior to September, 1897, I had doctored for my stomach trouble, for several years, going through a course of treatment without any real benefit. In September, 1896, I had very sick spells and grew worse; could eat but little. I commenced in September, 1897, to take Dr. Pierce's medicine, and in a short time I could eat and work. I have gained twenty pounds in two months."

Sometimes a dealer, tempted by the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines, will offer the customer a substitute as being "just as good" as the "Discovery." It is better for him because it pays better, but it is not as good for you, if you want the medicine that has cured others and which you believe will cure you.

MANY ENJOYED THE MERRY DANCE.

LARGE ATTENDANCD AT THE BALL.

The New Years Ball a Grand Success. Many Visitors Present.

Early on New Years eve the terpsichoreans began to assemble at Union hall to participate in the pleasures provided for them by the Woman's Club.

Shortly after nine o'clock the grand march, headed by John McDonnell and Miss Celeste Granice, marked the beginning of a merry time which continued till after four a. m. All cares of the outside world were driven from the hall and merriment and joy reigned supreme.

About midnight another marked feature was that of the supper march which was led by Mr. Clarence Nauman and Miss Theo Bates. The dainty spread was far above the expectations of all. It being most tastily prepared and bountious in supply. Nothing was lacking to make this feature pleasing to the large number that indulged therein.

The decorations of the hall were very tastefully arranged and reflect much credit on the ladies who showed their talent in carrying out this work.

The music was supplied by three pieces from Maxwell's San Francisco orchestra comprising the cello, violin and piano.

An unuasually large crowd was in attendance and the capacity of the hall was thoroughly taxed. A large number of outside visitors were present from San Francisco, Santa Rosa, Petaluma, Glen Ellen and Eldridge.

It is thought the Club will net about $60 for their efforts.

W. T. Rutledge Takes a Trip South Where He Becomes a Benedict.

W. T. Rutledge, who has charge of the electric light plant, left here about two weeks ago to visit relatives in the southern part of the state. He returned last Tuesday evening accompanied by his bride. This was not surprising to his friends as an announcement of his marriage to Miss Sadie Cadwallader had preceeded them.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents in East Highlands at noon on Thursday December 26th. Mr. and Mrs. Rutledge will occupy the Schuster house on First street East.

The happy couple have the best wishes of the many friends which the groom has made during his sojourn here.

Miss Julia Landgrebe the Bride of Fred Lyall of Phoenix.

On December 19th Miss Julia Landgrebe, formerly of this place, was married to Mr. Fred Lyall of Phoenix, Arisona. Mrs. Lyall is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Landgrebe of this place and is well known here where she has many friends who will be surprised to learn of the wedding. The groom is an engineer on the S. P. road running out of Tuscon.

This time with Miss Alma de Brettville, a noted artist of the city, who accuses him of talking about her in barrooms. It appears there is a lawyer and letters in the case and possibly if Mr. Anderson was a man of moderate means there would be no attention paid to what he may have said.

WEDDING BELLS OF NEW YEARS DAY.

SONOMA VALLEY YOUNG PEOPLE WED.

Miss Janett Campbell Becomes the Bride of Frank W. Thompson.

Wedding bells chimed again on New Years day when Mr. Frank W. Thompson and Miss Janett Campbell were united in marriage by Rev. Chas. C. Kirtland.

The home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O. Campbell, was beautifully decorated with ivy, smilax, pink and white roses. The bridal couple took their place at 12 o'clock in the large bay window where the ceremony was preformed. The bride wore a gown of blue silk and carried white carnations. The groom was attired in the conventional black.

After the ceremony the guests were ushered into the large dining room where an elegant lunch was spread.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Cutter, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Potter, Miss Mae Thompson, Miss Emma Campbell, Miss Ione Pennington, of San Francisco, Ralph Thompson and Albert Campbell.

A False Report Corrected.

Mr. and Mrs. Baines, who had the misfortune last week to loose a child with diphtheria, have been much perplexed at the report that they had lost a child in Salt Lake City from this dreaded disease and had fled to California to save the remaining children. The fact is that some months ago they did loose a child there with scarlet fever and were in quarantine at that time the required period and they dislike to have it reported to the contrary.

The other children, who are down with diphtheria, are getting along nicely and as yet no sign of the disease spreading has been manifest.

Miss Annie Englund Passes Away After a Brief Illness.

Miss Annie Englund who was taken sick at the B. F. Campbell home about three weeks ago died at the home of her parents on one of Mrs. Snyder's ranches north east of town early Saturday morning. She had been suffering with inflamation of the bowels which caused her death.

The young lady had attended the public school here and was well known among the young people. At the time of her death she was aged 16 years, 11 months and 5 days. The remains were enterred in the Valley cemetery.

The bereved family have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in their hour of sorrow.

Christmas Week a Merry Time at the Home for Feeble Minded Children

The usual Christmas festivities were observed at the Home last week and the numerous inmates had a merry time. On Christmas morning the large hall was aglow with a huge Christmas tree beautifully decorated and heavily laden with presents. None of the inmates were forgotten there being gifts for all. One of the features of the decorations was a magnificent Christmas bell in electric globes. Music was rendered by the band and there were suitable exercises.

The inmates were also treated to a genuine Christmas dinner which was greatly appreciated by them.

On Friday night and Monday night Dr. Lawlor treated the inmates to stereopticon entertainments.

Joaquin Hansen Struck by the South Bound Passenger This Afternoon.

Joaquin Hansen a well known Indian of this valley was struck by the south bound passenger train at 3:37 as it was rounding the curve just at the edge of town. The unfortunate man was struck on the left side of his head cutting a deep gash the full length of his head.

Hansen had been in town in the morning and had inbibed too liberally in fire water and appearently wandered out of town and laid down on the Rea crossing and went to sleep where the engine struck him.

Owing to the sharp curve it was impossible to see him in time to prevent the accident.

The unfortunate man was picked up and brought to town where Dr. Thomson, at this writing is dressing the wound, and states he may possibly recover.

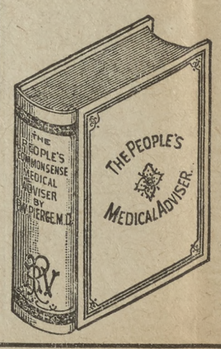
EVERY DAY adds to the list of deaths attributed to heart failure. If the truth were told the bulk of these deaths might be written down as due to stomach failure. For it is in the failure of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, that "weak" heart, "weak" lungs, "weak" nerves and other forms of physical deterioration have their beginning. The man whose stomach is sound, who can digest and assimilate the food he eats, and so keep each organ of the body well nourished, is the man who is least liable to collapse under the sudden weakness of some vital organ.

HEART FAILURE

The preservation of health which follows the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, is chiefly due to the fact that it perfectly and permanently cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, purifies the blood and increases the blood supply of the body. Weak people will find in this medicine a sure means of strength.

There is no alcohol contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.



"I was under doctors' care for quite a time," writes Mr. J. F. Kidd, of Parmleysville, Wayne Co., Ky. "They had almost given me up, and my suffering was very great. My pulse was weak, breath short and I had severe pains in back, head and legs. Had palpitation of heart, and for eleven months I was not able to do a day's work. I purchased five bottles of Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and by the time the fifth bottle was gone I was a well man."

SISTERS OF CHARITY

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 8, 1901.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after farther use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."

SISTERS OF CHARITY.

This young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat, with good results as the above letter testifies.

SISTERS OF CHARITY

All Over United States Use Pe-ru-na for Catarrh.

From a Catholic institution in Ohio comes the following recommend from the Sister Superior:

"Some years ago a friend of our institution recommended to us Dr. Hartman's Peruna as an excellent remedy for the influenza of which we then had several cases which threatened to be of a serious character.

"We began to use it and experienced such wonderful results that since then Peruna has become our favorite medicine for influenza, catarrh, cold, cough and bronchitis."

SISTER SUPERIOR.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen:—"I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head, and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing."

Congressman David Meekison.

DAVID MEEKISON.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

BEAVER TAIL SOUP.

A Michigan Lumber Camp Delicacy That Amazed a Marylander.

"Although I am a Marylander and an Eastern Shore one at that," said an epicure from that state, "and consequently know what good things to eat are, I want to tell you that I'll have to take off my hat to the lumber camp cook of the upper Michigan peninsula as the discoverer, fabricator and dispenser of a dish that knocks the Eastern Shore cuisine silly. And that rare lumber camp dish is beaver tail soup.

"I was with Colonel Park of Columbus, O., deer hunting in the Rainy lake region of Michigan one fall. We lived at a lumber camp boarding shanty.

"When the beaver was brought into camp, the camp cook went nearly wild, and so did the lumbermen when they heard the news, all because they had been trying to trap a beaver for weeks, not for its fur, but for its tail, as they were pining, they said, for beaver tail soup.

"The cook took that broad appendage of the beaver, mailed like an armadillo, took from it the underlying bone and meat, and from it made such a soup as never came from any other stock at the beck of the most expert and scientific chef that ever put a kettle on.

"We could do the same thing and perhaps better on the Eastern Shore, but we lack one thing. We haven't got the beavers to yield us their tails."—New York Sun.

ISOLATION OF ACTORS.

Conditions Which Make the Profession a World by Itself.

This condition, which from some important points of view is fortunate, from others unfortunate and from nearly all inevitable, is unique indeed. Here we have the only large class of workers which keeps the world at arm's length. Clergymen, physicians, lawyers, architects, merchants, tradesmen and laborers of all sorts, by the very terms of their toil are brought into constant personal contact with parishioners, patients, clients or customers. Even painters and sculptors must needs be in touch with their patrons.

But that thin, impassable row of blazing lamps which rims the front of the stage accomplishes what the great wall of China was built to accomplish. Behind them is the sole "profession," in front of them the barbarous laity. If the player desired to break down the partition, he would scarcely be able to do so.

From the more important social gatherings which take place in the evening both actress and actor are necessarily absent. The actor may vote if he can acquire a residence and contrive to be in his own city on election day, but it is impossible that he should take any active part in politics or participate in preliminary meetings, caucuses and rallies which are held at night, and as to attendance at church, the player encounters, in the first place, the difficulty, inseparable from his wandering life, of making a connection with a parish and, besides, in recent years, is almost constantly required to travel on Sunday, passing from a Saturday evening's performance in one town to a Monday morning's rehearsal in another.—Atlantic Monthly.

Providing For a Wayward Son.

Lord Chesterfield gave advice to his son in sundry letters, which might or might not be followed, but in his will he took good care that "my godson, Philip Stanhope," should have strong inducement to follow his advice on at least one point. All the bequests are subject to the condition that if Philip should keep race horses or hounds or stay one night at Newmarket, "that infamous seminary of iniquity and ill manners," during the course of the races there, or should lose on any one day by betting or gaming as much as £500, then in such case he shall forfeit £5,000 to the dean and chapter of Westminster for every such offense.—All the Year Round.

Know Your Own Capacity.

If the people about you are carrying on their business or their benevolence at a pace which draws the life out of you, resolutely take a slower pace; be called a laggard, make less money, accomplish less work than they, but be what you are meant to be and can be. You have your natural limit of power as much as an engine—ten horsepower or twenty or a hundred. You are fit to do certain kinds of work, and you need a certain kind and amount of fuel and a certain kind of handling.—George S. Merriam.

Cleaning Jewels.

With the exception of pearls jewels may be washed with warm water and pure soap. They should then be put in boxwood sawdust to dry. If this is done, polishing will be unnecessary. As boxwood sawdust is very fine, it will not scratch, and as it absorbs moisture rapidly it helps to give jewels a high polish. It can be procured from any dealer in jeweler's supplies or ordered through a jeweler.

A yard was once any stick, rod or pole. The expression is still used with this meaning when applied to the various parts of the ship's equipments, as yardarm, sailyard, and the like.

TOPICS OF MOMENT TO AGRICULTURISTS

AN ORCHARD IN GRASS.

Mr. Grant Hitchings, a prominent apple raiser of New York, in speaking of his orchard, says that he keeps it in grass continually, but anyone studying his methods can see that it is not the fact that his orchard being in grass that causes the fine crops, but that he takes such good care of the trees that they bear in spite of the grass. There are but two features of his grass plan which commend it and they are "the grass is cut and left where it falls and in this manner serves as a mulch," and "at the same time I add as much straw as I can spare as a top dressing." In other words not only is all the plant food taken up by the grass returned to the soil but the straw mulch rotting is added, and the mulch keeps the blossoms back in the spring and holds the moisture in the summer. Mr. Hitchings says: "The trees from which these apples were taken vary from five to one hundred years in age. The most of them, however, vary from five to twelve years. I have sprayed regularly for the past eight years, but do not prune at all. In my opinion a young tree is vigorous enough without pruning, as this only increases wood growth at the expense of the fruit bud formation. I spray three times with bordeaux mixture each season, adding one-third pound of paris green to fifty gallons. I make the first application just as the buds swell; spraying a second time just before the blossoms open, and a third time soon after the blossoms fall. Sometimes I spray a fourth time, if it rains hard before the calyx end of the apple closes, my object being to encase a little of the poison in the blossom end of the apple if possible.

The underlying principle of the successful management of an apple orchard lies in the fact that one must keep the soil loose and porous, so that air and roots can penetrate deeply. The soil must also be filled with humus to hold moisture and maintain bacteria action. So far as my experience goes, I believe these conditions can be maintained more successfully and far cheaper by leaving the orchard in sod rather than by cultivation.

"In my orchards from the time the trees are set, grass is allowed to grow. For the first ten years it is cut and raked and placed around the trees as a mulch. In orchards of ten years' standing or older, the grass is cut and left where it falls and in this manner serves as a mulch for the entire area. I cut the grass but once during the season, the time depending on the soil and moisture. If suffering from drouth, as last year, I cut early in June, but if conditions prevail such as we had this season, I defer the cutting until the last of July. I do not permit any stock to run in my orchards, as I want all the grass for mulching. At the same time I add as much straw as I can spare as a top dressing. If I am a judge at all the dark green foliage, bright bark, annual growth, size of leaves, together with five successive crops and the present vigorous condition of the trees, are expressions of approval on the part of Nature, at least in my case, on this system of apple culture.

"In selecting a site for an orchard I would choose a sidehill sloping toward the north. The trees should be 38 feet apart one way and 28 to 36 feet the other, varying the distance so as to select the best spots of ground in the row for the trees. This system will also help break the force of the winds during severe storms. I believe it is better to mix varieties, as they will set better under ordinary circumstances."

TRAINING A CALF.

Some of our advanced dairymen differ greatly in their opinions on how to manage the calf immediately after birth. One man says: "I prefer to take the calf away rather than be troubled caring for sore teats of the cow. Use for convenience a shallow and broad metal pail, milking for a large calf three quarts, for a small calf about two quarts of milk. Then, after gently caressing the calf, stroke the neck or back with the hand or talking kindly to it, place the milk under its nose and the fingers touching the lips, but not in the mouth; soon it will begin to try to get hold of your fingers; then gently push its nose down into the milk, and in its effort to get hold of your finger it will get a taste of the milk and is very apt to drink. A little patience and kindness will meet with success. After it has been taught to drink you will find it much better to always place it in a stanchion at feeding time and let it remain there a short time after it gets through eating, so that it will not form the habit of sucking the other calves' ears." Some others prefer to let the calves remain with their mothers until they are three or four days old. Probably the latter has more followers than the former. It is evident that either proceeding gives good results and may be adopted without detriment to the future welfare of the cows.—Exchange.

The soil best suited to the cucumber is a warm, sandy loam, though they will grow on any soil if the preparation be proper and the season conditions right. The seed must not be planted till all danger from frost is past. It is usual to plant cucumbers in the place where they are to grow, as the leaves wilt easily after transplanting. The soil should be deeply and thoroughly prepared, as the roots of cucumbers are great runners and deep feeders. The hills should be four or five feet apart each way. Where seeds are sown in the hills they should be thinned to two or three in a hill after they are up and have escaped the attacks of the bugs. Keep the ground clear of weeds as long as possible. Some successful growers, when growing cucumbers on a small scale, use a barrel of water, planting the cucumbers around it.

THE GENERAL PURPOSE COW.

On the same grounds that it is better to read any decent literature than to read nothing, a farmer is justified in keeping any kind of a cow he believes in, if she pays her way, than to keep no cow. One will do poorly with anything he does not believe in. He must first be convinced that he needs better books and papers before he is able to appreciate better ones, or to utilize them. And so it is with cows. There are of course modifications of this principle, and as relating to dairy cows is summarized by a writer as follows:

"If a farmer is so situated that he does not have the advantage of first-class facilities for making butter, that is, if he cannot reasonably expect to receive at least 20 cents per pound by the year, the probabilities are fair that it will not pay to invest in special dairy cattle exclusively for dairy purposes.

If a farmer can receive from 15 to 20 cents per pound on the average by the year, and other expenses are not too high, it may pay him, and perhaps will be best, to handle dual purpose stock, make a moderate amount of butter to sell at a fair price, and raise calves and fatten for market.

If a farmer is so situated that he has no local market for butter at suitable prices and does not care to go to the trouble of expressing to regular city customers or to a commission house, then he certainly does not want the dairy type, and probably not the dual purpose cow, but the out-and-out beef animal, from the fact that beef will probably be the only thing that he will be able to produce at a profit.

ABOUT SELLING APPLES.

If apples are sold to commission men or fruit dealers it is best to consult them as to the time and manner of packing, says the Farmers' Tribune. They are familiar with the wants of the trade and know best how to meet its demands. A large crop of good winter apples can sometimes be disposed of to the best advantage by selling in the orchard for a lump sum. This obviates the work and worry of marketing, and holding such a perishable crop for higher prices is risky business. It is not apt to pay unless one is a good judge of the market and the fruit is well stored. Where the apples are sold on the trees one should be able to correctly estimate the quantity of apples on a tree and know the highest price which they will command on the market. But, however the crop is sold, it is well for the orchardist to have the picking under his control, as the trees are often injured, limbs broken, etc.

WATERING HORSES.

A writer in the Iowa Homestead says that where it can be done a good practice is to water a horse about thirty minutes before he is fed his grain. If it cannot be done then, a very good time is to water immediately before the grain is fed. If water must be given after eating it should not be given for two hours. This is a simple rule that any horse owner can understand and if it is practiced much trouble will be avoided.

The people of the Untied States must raise more cattle, go without steak or resort to horse flesh. We cannot import beef and we do not want to import it. It is true that we import some 75,000 head from Mexico every year, but it is not good, and comes high on account of the tariff of about $2.50 per head. The quarantine also hinders importation. There is no reason why Americans should not raise enough beef to supply all home demands and cater to foreign wants and the farmer that wakes up to the real possibilities will reap a harvest.

When the grass is killed by frost, wean the colt, if he be old enough, and put him in a paddock or box stall with a ground floor. Feed him good, sweet hay, second growth is the best, and a feeding twice a day of oats, bran and oil meal. Give from a pint to a quart according to age and size. Keep the stall well bedded and level. A colt fed in this way will never have unsound legs.—Garden and Farm.

Farm horses should go barefooted until there is a necessity for shoeing to preserve the hoof. Like farm boys, they should wear no shoes except on special occasions until they are about fourteen years old. Many horses can serve a lifetime on the farm without being shod.

Andrew Carnegie has given away $40,000,000 in 1901. This has been the first year Carnegie has been able to devote his undivided attention to giving away his money, in line with his declared intention not to die rich. When Carnegie wrote his famous saying, "To die rich is to die disgraced," the public was incredulous. That was seven years ago. Nearly two years ago, when the quotation from his own pen was shown to him, with the query, "How is it to be accomplished?" Mr. Carnegie said, "Watch and see." In 1899 Mr. Carnegie gave away $5,000,000. New Year's day, 1901, his gifts aggregated $20,000,000. In 1901, as Mr. Carnegie has had nothing else to do, he has multiplied the amount of all his former gifts by two. Andrew Carnegie bids fair to live beyond the scriptural seventy years. He was 64 years old November 25th. At his present rate of giving, he will be comparatively poor five years hence.

A Christmas Dinner That Was Not Eaten because of indigestion! This sorry tale would not have been told if the system had been regulated by the use of Nature's remedy, Garfield Tea. This wonderful Herb medicine cures all forms of stomach, liver and bowel derangements, cleanses the system, purifies the blood and lays the foundation for long life and continued good health. Garfield Tea is equally good for old and young.

CAUSE OF FALLING HAIR.

Dandruff, Which Is a Germ Disease—Kill the Germ.

Falling hair is caused by dandruff, which is a germ disease. The germ in burrowing in to the root of the hair, where it destroys the vitality of the hair, causing the hair to fall out, digs up the cuticle in little scales, called dandruff or scurf. You can't stop the falling hair without curing the dandruff, and you can't cure the dandruff without killing the dandruff germ. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Newbro's Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ. Herpicide is also a delightful hair dressing.

SYRUP OF FIGS

Acts Gently;
Acts Pleasantly;
Acts Beneficially;
Acts truly as a Laxative.

Syrup of Figs appeals to the cultured and the well-informed and to the healthy, because its component parts are simple and wholesome and because it acts without disturbing the natural functions, as it is wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance. In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal virtues of Syrup of Figs are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially.
